

THE INCHCOLM

73 Wickham Terrace, Spring Hill QLD 4000

EVENTS KIT

Classicaly Boutique

The neo-Georgian design with an edge pays homage to the building's time of prestige and resident physicians, with subtle hints of musical undertones and an air of rhapsody. You are invited to explore a world full of tiny treasures, curiosities and eclectic art pieces all coming seamlessly together creating a space to choose the perfectly cosy spot and unwind, relax, or enjoy a tippie or two in solitude.

Think Gertrude Stein's Paris salon, where Hemingway, Fitzgerald, Picasso, Banksy, Lennon and Bowie would comfortably rub shoulders while sharing trailblazing ideas and indulging in bistro and bar classics.

Welcome to The Inchcolm.

Maintaining the building's architectural heritage from its original construction in the 1920's, the hotel forges into the next phase, with design and dining fusing together modern artistic elements and the sophistication from the 1920's, 30's and 40's.

The Inchcolm was part of the interwar redevelopment of the medical precinct along Wickham Terrace. The terrazzo on the front stairs has held this position since the 1920s when the building that is now The Inchcolm Hotel was built as a medical practice.

The original owners Marie Thomson and her husband Dr John Thomson were well known as Socialites of the time. Hosting events was common practice in their world, very regularly hosting the elite and affluent.

The Charleston Room

Named after the dance, The Charleston rhythm was popularised in mainstream dance music in the United States by a 1923 tune called “The Charleston”, which became one of the most popular hits of the decade.

The room features a state-of-the-art conference and meeting offering which shares the theming of the hotel. It is a multi-use space which can be divided into three smaller spaces: The Charleston Room One, The Charleston Room Two, and The Charleston Room Three. The pillarless room with tall heritage style windows filters the daytime natural light and accesses the evenings city lights.

The Martini Cart

To this day, the exact origins of the Martini glass are hazy. However, our story and connection to the Martini is to the late wife of the original owner of Inchcolm, Mari Jean Thompson, a well-known Brisbane socialite of the 1910's & 20's. The Martini was not only Marie Jean's most popular tippie, but it was a coveted drink of her affluent and most extravagant of parties.

The Inchcolm houses one of the best martini bars in town - The Inchcolm Bar. Here, we bring back the golden age of bistro dining with a carefully crafted, 11 Martini menu that pays tribute to a bygone era.

With events at The Inchcolm, you can bring this Martini Story to life with our Martini Cart Upgrade for either $20 per person, or $59 per person. Ask your event coordinator for more information.
